

Particulars of the wreck of the ship Powhattan.

The wreck of the ship Powhattan is the most lamentable that has occurred for a long time. Three hundred and twelve passengers and a crew of twenty-six men on board. All were on the ship. We copy the following brief account from the New York Herald of Saturday. The passengers were chiefly German and Irish. The ship was bound for New York from Liverpool. When first discovered by Capt. Jennings of Long Beach, which was on Wednesday morning, the Powhattan lay with her head to the south, the decks were crowded with passengers, and the sea was making a perfect beach over her. The wind blowing a perfect gale from the north-west, the waves ran mountain high, twisting the ship about in the sand as if she was merely a cork boat. Seeing the condition of the vessel, Capt. Jennings, who is stationed at a wreck master on the beach, sent all the men that were at his command, though the snow storm was raging violently, to the Government House, in order to bring the life and other wrecking apparatus, and stood on shore himself watching the effects of the waves upon the ill-fated vessel. Hour after hour passed, but the sea did not subside, and the vessel became more and more exposed, and many of the unfortunate people were swept off by the heavy surf. About 6 o'clock P. M., the lights were visible fully one hundred persons overboard, who were carried away down the beach by the undertow. Some of them came ashore and were picked up by the crew of the ship, who searched in vain for a survivor amongst the number, but all had reached the beach, being washed by the force of the waves pushing them against the hull of the vessel and throwing them with violent force upon the beach.

At this time Capt. Myers, who was on the deck of the Powhattan at this time, called out in a loud voice to Mr. Jennings, entreating him to try and save some of those who might be washed ashore. Capt. Jennings replied that all those who came ashore were dead, and that it was no use looking for them as they were all killed before they got out of the water.

About seven o'clock, the ships mast went by the board, and almost immediately afterwards the hull burst in two, and every soul on board was launched into eternity. The sea presented one black mass of human heads and floating pieces of the wreck, but in a few moments all had sunk to rise no more. The beach was strewn with the dead bodies of women and children, pieces of the wreck baggage of the passengers and empty casks. Nothing remained to mark the spot where the ill-fated ship had gone ashore, except a few pieces of wreckage upon a fragment of the hull which lay upon the beach.

The crying of the drowning men and the shrieking of the women and children was heard all day in the deep, numbered with the dead while the wind wailed loud and mournfully adding still more horror to the awful catastrophe. All had sunk—captain, officers, crew and passengers of two hundred and fifty persons not a soul was left to tell the tale. No aid came from the Government House that night, and Captain Jennings was compelled to remain there by himself a lonely watcher of the dead.

On Monday morning four men arrived from the station house, but their help came too late. The storm, it seems, was so severe, that while on their way back to the wreck on Sunday, with the lifeboat and mortars they were all exhausted, and the whole party was obliged to return nearly frozen to death. This party of men, under command of Capt. Jennings, set immediately about finding and gathering together those bodies that had been washed ashore. In the short space of an hour nearly twenty women and children were found, almost naked, scattered along the beach, some of them dreadfully bruised and cut.

One man was found about fifty yards from the beach upon the sand hills with a child in his arms, and from this condition it is supposed that he alone, of all on board, reached the shore alive, and crawling out of reach of the waves, in order to save his own life, and that of the infant in his arms, fell down exhausted on the sand, and was frozen to death during the night. The child was firmly locked in his arms, quite dead, and appeared as if it had also died on the shore from exposure.

All along the shore for ten miles were scattered the remains of the chests and trunks of the passengers, many of them having names inscribed on the lids and sides. Feather beds, cooking utensils, empty casks and pieces of the vessel were to be seen on every side. Letters of the dead were scattered here and there, and the whole scene presented a melancholy and a heart-rending scene.

The latest accounts from the wreck, received at Philadelphia, state the total number of bodies recovered was one hundred and twenty.

The inhabitants in the vicinity were timid about touching the bodies, and but few were found to assist in the melancholy duty of preparing them for a grave in the land of strangers although some human hyenas were found base enough to rob them.

Further by the Arabia.

Posters, April 26.—The Arabia arrived here at 4 o'clock, making the run in 29 hours. The mail for the South was forwarded this evening by the steamboat and train due in New York to-morrow morning.

General Conference of the Methodist Church.

The General Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, will assemble in the city, on Tuesday, the 2nd day of May. It will be composed of Ministerial and Lay Delegates from every part of the United States, including Oregon. There are 32 annual Conferences of this church, embraced in an equal number of Districts. From each of these Conferences there are at least, one Ministerial and one Lay Delegate; and, from some of them, four or five of each; the number being regulated by the number of members in the District. The Representatives are elected by the ministers and laymen, in the Annual Conferences next preceding the General Conference, which meets every four years. When assembled, they all vote together, in forming and modifying rules, for the itinerant, literary, missionary, and every other department.

From the respectability of this body of Christians, and the genius of their government, we should expect some intelligent Ministers and laymen to be present on such an occasion.

On the 1st Sabbath of the Conference, the new church on 5th street, will be dedicated to the worship of God. By whom the respective services of the day will be performed, we have not learned; but presume that some of the Ministers from a distance will be invited to participate, in delivering appropriate discourses. As soon as we can learn from the committee of arrangements who are to officiate, we will give the public notice.

There will be about one hundred delegates. We learn that provision is made for their comfortable accommodation. The session will be one of considerable interest, as it is expected that questions of great importance will be before the Conference.

The sessions will be held in the lecture room of the new church, on 5th street, and will be open to all who wish to hear the deliberations.—Steuvenville Herald.

This body will convene in Steuvenville on the 2nd day of May next; and as delegates from every Annual Conference have been promptly elected, it is presumable that a full representation will be in attendance. The General Conference is the highest official body known to the church, and much responsibility rests upon its shoulders at this particular time; but as its members are composed of Clergy and Laity, chosen fresh from the bosom of the membership, it is fair to presume that they are all well posted on nearly every question which is likely to come in the composition of this assembly which is not witnessed in many of the churches in our land. There will be no pompous assumption that we, the Clergy, "have a divine right to lord it over God's heritage"; and clergy and laity meet together as brothers of one common family, and on the same common platform of "equal rights."

We are credibly informed that the Rev. Alexander McCane, author of the "History and Mystery of Methodism," of South Carolina, will be in attendance. Mr. McCane is a traveling preacher under the self constituted and first Bishop known to the Methodist Episcopal Church of this country, Francis Asbury; and though his head is now silvered with the frosts of more than three quarters of a century, he is yet in the vigor of health and brilliancy of mind. We have few instances in the history of our great men—Statesmen, Warriors and Divines—where they have retained all their intellectual vigor and clearness peculiar to the middle aged, up to their "three score years and ten," and in no instance, General Jackson not excepted, has this great blessing been vouchsafed, in a greater degree than to Rev. Alexander McCane. In a word, he is an anomaly in human nature.

Securities of a Young Wife.—The New Orleans Delta records the suicide of a beautiful and interesting young wife in that city. The name of the young woman was Maria Anna Low; she was about sixteen years of age. About one year since she married a man named Low. They lived unhappily together, and she had reason for believing that her husband had ceased to love her or to remember and respect the vows he made in marriage, and had transferred his affections to another woman, who resided in the immediate neighborhood. Day before yesterday, the young wife (her husband having been absent from her for several days), repaired to the house of this woman and inquired if her husband was not there. She was answered by the woman, "I don't know anything about your husband, but there is my husband," pointing to a gentleman seated in the room, in whom the young wife recognized the traitor lord. She uttered not a word of complaint, but returning to her home, despatched the servant to a drug store in the vicinity for an ounce of laudanum.

She wrote a long and extremely pathetic letter, and then taking laudanum, laid herself down on her unheeded bed—ouch and died. Yesterday morning her mother visited the house very early, and found her daughter dead. She stated, "that having nothing more to live for, despoised by him she loved, and robbed of all hopes of happiness in this world, she preferred death to the miserable existence which lay open before her, and she calmly and deliberately destroyed her own life by taking laudanum."

Her son, who was upbraided her husband, she had ever and still dearly loved him—forgave him all the wrongs she had suffered at his hands, through his cruel neglect and desertion. She hoped, too, that God would forgive him as she did—and that he might live long and happily. The husband came in while the inquest was being held, and appeared a good deal affected, and expressed sorrow for the loss of his youthful and beautiful wife; he, however, denied the charges of infidelity, and neglect made against him by the letter of his wife, as well as by the testimony of several witnesses.

Anti-Rentism.—It appears that the spirit of "anti-rentism" in New York has not yet completely died out. The Troy Budget says that a party of men, disguised as Indians, entered the residence of the Deputy Sheriff in Nassau village on the 9th inst., about the time Mr. W. was undressing to retire to bed, and forced him to deliver up certain papers in his possession. As Mr. W. was not prepared for the attack, and the "Indians" seemed determined on securing the papers or making a great deal of trouble the "documents" were handed over, and the party left peacefully.

A late letter from Paris says the "power and influence of America are every day being pushed forward into public regard, by the present crisis of European affairs. Her gigantic strides as a maritime power, while European States are falling on one another, like hungry dogs quarrelling about a bone, will, it is secretly felt, make her, one day, the mistress of the destinies of the Old World. Depend upon it, France and England have no desire to provoke her, and least of all, just now. President Pierce may do what he likes with the "authorities at Cuba."

Volume XXI

Of the Sentinel comes to-day, with the present number. Three years of anxiety, uncertainty and toil have just ended, since we have been connected with its publication, and associated in its capacity of its editor, with the good people of Harrison County.

In reviewing the past three years we have no regrets to confess, although we are not so vain as to believe that what we could have done some things better than they were done. But our weary mind has been to furnish the Democracy and the citizens of Harrison County with a good Democratic newspaper, and we believe our efforts have not been in vain, as our constantly increasing patronage indicates. In the future we shall labor more earnestly than ever to make the Sentinel just such a paper as its citizens may well be proud of. To insure success in any good cause it is necessary to persevere. Thus we have a good share of. But to make still greater improvements on the paper, a few more subscribers would be acceptable. We would be glad if our friends in different parts of the county would make a little exertion on our behalf.

There are also a large number who are indebted to us for subscription, advertising and job work. If it would not be too much of an inconvenience to them, we would be glad if they would call and settle up the little amount they owe us. It would be small to them, but in the aggregate large to us.

Don't forget that Benjamin's Menagerie will be here to-day. Get your quarters ready and go to the show.

Our correspondent on taggerywriting would do well to stick closely to his subject, and not throw out any hints that might be considered personal.

Mr. Hugh Jamison, travel store-keeper at Boston, and brother-in-law of President Pierce, departed this life on the 27th ult.

Good.—The legislature on the 23rd ult., passed a bill prohibiting the circulation of foreign bank notes of a denomination exceeding ten dollars.

We learn by English telegraph, New York, April 23, that Captain Ericsson's electric ship was captured near Jersey City during a squall, and sunk in twenty feet of water.

On next Monday, the 5th inst., the trial of Michael Manly, for murder in the first degree, commences in the Belmont county court.

The Wheeling Gazette says that the railroad struck by lightning on the 22nd ult., and considerably damaged.

Gov. Gorman of Minnesota Territory, says that the territory contains now about 100,000 inhabitants, and will apply for admission to the Union in about three years.

There ever was a man that tried to climb and coax in with any organization, our neighbor is certainly one. If the friends of this county do not believe that he is one of them, they certainly will be hard of belief. He coaxes hard for favor.

RECENTLY.—Some desperate characters have been committing numerous burglaries in Springfield, Ohio, for some time past. A few nights since, the county treasurer's office, several stores and dwellings were broken open and robbed.

Secret Political Organization.

Every now and then, says the Washington Union, we see in the Northern and Southern press assertions that there is a powerful organization on foot to revive the principles of the native American party. Every organization which adopts a restrictive policy is entitled to respect, and there is no cause among rational men adapted to honest opposition, other than one which fairly combats the argument upon which that organization may rely. But if we may determine, from the working of its means and connection, it does not afford any substantial ground for combating its basis, and is pregnant with evils which we think every calm observer will easily determine for himself.

A secret political society is in itself an unmixed mischief. Every constitution is not so firmly rooted to the soil but that this process of undermining is dangerous to its stability; for, if public opinion and the action of leading men justify the idea that it is right to combine, under the sanction of an obligation to secrecy, to maintain a policy which its members may deem best suited to preserve the elements of our government, we cannot tell at what time they may secretly unite to enforce their theories, which may radically differ from the positions held by the native Americans. In the intervening period we shall behold a spectacle which has never yet disgraced our political history. With a constitution that allows of and encourages the freest discussion; with the accession of right of appeal in individuals, as well as to the people, which is the grandest and mightiest tribunal ever opened to the intellect of man, with a system that holds it no treason, but a duty, to strain and investigate the conduct of a government, no less than the operation of the laws, what shall be thought of meetings, which the various Generals of Germany, the thousand secret associations of modern Italy, retire from the open day to execute their purposes in darkness and seclusion?

Our word of warning upon this subject is addressed not to leaders, but to followers. We can understand the selfish purposes of personal ambition which induce a few desperate men to avail themselves of local divisions or the prejudices of nationality. But at the followers take heed of what they do to advance such ends. If they combine against those who have been formerly named by law, to prevent them from obtaining that place or power to which they have an equal right with any to aspire, they are seeking virtually to nullify the constitution itself; nay, more—they are actively assisting to the aggregation of the foreign-born citizens into a community separate in feeling and political interests. They are exciting animosities in the minds of such, even while they are unable to prevent the use of a franchise equal to their own. They are seeking to set apart and brand as felons, men who every consideration of expediency, no less than the principles of justice, would require to be treated as men, and not as aliens.

The danger of which we are warned, if they exist, have been created by the injudicious course, which seems more boldly pursued than ever. No honest man will ever hesitate to meet the discussion upon the subject of our naturalization laws, if the question is ever again raised in Congress. But when these reformers manifest no intention to discuss it, where only its discussion can avail anything, its agitation in other walks is an unmitigated and dangerous evil.

From the news gathered by the arrival of the Arabia, and which may be found in to-day's paper, it will be seen that the "Powers" are preparing for the contest in earnest, and unless some adjustment, now being to be anticipated, is speedily made, the most bloody conflict ever witnessed on the European continent, will be the consequence. It is a fact in the history of warfare, says an exchange, that is not always noted, that all improvements in the arms and munitions for destruction; really tend to make more bloody and fatal the "interchange of arms." While the "bear and the grizzly" were made by the bill, the broad sword and the spear of earlier times, are now rare, yet the inventions and improvements in the art of war are now such, that when hostile, well-trained and appointed armies meet, the slaughter and loss of life will be quadrupled in a given space of time. With the modern improvements in arms, with "power powder," with the rapid succession of a collision between armies composed of two hundred thousand French, English, Egyptians and Turks on the one side, and an equal number of well-disciplined and well-appointed Russians on the other, 30,000 French troops have already landed at the city of Constantinople, an equal number of English troops are on their way to join them, while each will be followed up with heavy reinforcements immediately. The combined fleets in the Buxine are numerous and formidable, while Admiral Napier has the flower of the English navy in the Baltic ready to crush the Russian fleet as it comes out of the departure of the ice. Chronstadt is the port of St. Petersburg, and it is expected that the English fleet will "carry the war into Africa," and attempt to force the bombardment of that port and the destruction of the Russian fleet and shipping. Such an effort will be attended with a terrible result, and the progress of it will add to the horrors of a "battle on the Baltic." Although the present war will be the most eventful of the present century and its consequences will be felt in every portion of the civilized world. We shall endeavor to present our readers from time to time, with a full and complete account, as we do not doubt that this war will be watched with a deep interest by all.

TEACHER'S INSTITUTE.—On our fourth page will be found the proceedings of the Teacher's Institute for Jefferson and Harrison counties lately held in Steuvenville. These proceedings are published more for the gratification of teachers than any other else; and we are sure, how many teachers, and the class of our citizens there are, who take either of the county papers? We know of a few, but very few that do so. How many of those teachers then, who participated in the proceedings of the Institute, will have an opportunity of reading them, unless they borrow some other person's paper. Even their president has never favored either of his county papers with his subscription. We sometimes think that knowledge was altogether dependent on the mere portion of the school teachers it would soon become obsolete. But they would have been grateful publishing done than they? Echo answers who.

It is not particular to us what opinions the editor of the Republican, father Finley, or any other else may have about what is published in the Sentinel. We have and intend to speak our sentiments without fear or favor. And with the editor of the Republican to still further understand that we do not consider Father Finley the whole Methodist Church. It is useless for Hutton to undertake to prejudice that denomination against us, in a mean and underhanded manner, as he has done in his last paper in the article headed "father Finley." It will not win. His sarcasm is about as weak as his authority. We let it go for what it is worth, considering the source from whence it came." &c.

NEW YORK WOOL MARKET.—As the season for Wool contracts is drawing near, we shall hereafter give the New York market quotations to post up our readers, that they may have a correct knowledge of the worth of their cloth.

On the 27th the quotations were as follows:

American, Six Fleeces per lb. 54 5/8
Do Full Blood merino 48 5/8
Do 3/4 to 5/8 do 48 5/8
Do Native and 5/8 do 50 5/8
Full, Common 46 5/8
Do Superior 48 5/8
Do Extra 50 5/8

The following dispatch will show very plainly what effects wealth and money have upon some courts of justice:

London, April 27.—Matthew F. Ward, who was charged with the murder of Prof. Butler, was acquitted by the jury to-day.

We believe that if ever a man was guilty of willful deliberation, promissory murder, this Matthew F. Ward was.

Five dollar counterfeit notes on the Merchants' and Mechanics' Bank of Wheeling, well executed, are in circulation.

Patronize your Home Market.

There are many persons who entertain the idea, that when they have anything to sell, or wish to buy any article, they must go to home to get a good bargain; and hence they go to Wheeling, Steuvenville or some other town to purchase a few dollars' worth of goods. This is an erroneous idea in every particular. In the first place, they circulate their money away from home. And, moreover, they cannot possibly do as well as where they are known and dealt regularly. When a merchant sells to a constant customer an article below a living price, he must, necessarily charge him as much on the next article sold as will make up the deficiency in the first. In the second place, they are building up other towns and countries to the injury of their own.

Since we are to have a Railroad to this place, our merchants throughout this county, can and will pay as much for produce of every kind as in any part of the State, and can and will sell goods as cheap. We have some of the right kind of business men, who keep up with the progress of the times; and indeed are not to be excelled any where.
